

Providing for Your Companion Animals

Below are some ideas for getting started on creating your plan to ensure your companion animals will be taken care of if something unexpected should happen to you.

Create a Pet Trust: This legal document reserves funds specifically for your pet's care, ensuring they are provided for after you are gone.

Name a Caregiver in Your Will: You can designate a person to take care of your pets after you pass, ensuring they receive the care they deserve.

Designate a Permanent Caregiver: Choose someone you trust to provide long-term care for your pets, ensuring they have a loving home.

Inform Your Family and Close Friends: Let them know who you would like to take care of your pets and provide them with instructions for their care.

Consider Organizations: There are organizations that offer programs to help find homes for pets after their owners pass away. Below are some organizations to consider.
